Going to school in Patagonia

- 1 How do you get to school? Tell the class.
- 2 Look quickly at the article. How does Marco get to school?

Journey to school

Since he was six years old, Marco Grom has ridden 15 km every day to get to school in Patagonia.

Marco, now 14 years old, has ridden his horse, Rocinante, to school for seven years. He gets up at six o'clock every day and rides 15 km with his little sister, Pupi, behind him to the nearest school.

It takes him an hour and a half to get to school. He stays at school until two o'clock. Then he helps his parents with the animals on the farm. The Groms live in a small farm a long way from the nearest village.

Most of the other children also live on farms, but they can either walk there or they can get the school bus. Marco and Pupi can't get the bus because their farm isn't on a road. They have to ride Rocinante across the countryside to get to school.

Sometimes the weather is terrible and he and Pupi arrive late because it's snowing or there's a storm.

When he grows up, he wants to go to university and to study to be a vet so he can live and work on his parents' farm.
